J. U. H. S. CARRIES ON C. W. A. PROJECT

Jefferson Union high school is doing its part in furnishing projects for the unemployed under the Civil Works Administration. Beginning last week, six men have been employed grading and landscaping the grounds around the building. There will also be roads built, one on the west side of the new building and connecting the south road with the one leading to the automobile shop. Also the road along the north boundary will be extended to the main entrance to the football grounds.

The project has called for a good deal of labor in changing the landscaping both in front and in the rear of the school. The road leading past the south court is being torn out and will be replaced by lawn. Much shrubbery will be used in the new scheme of landscaping.

Mr. Matt Jensen donated his services to the high school district as engineer. The work of grading and landscaping is being done according to plans and specifications furnished by him.

Principal Ferguson, who is a member of the Civil Works Administration for San Mateo county, reports that the Jefferson Union high school project is but one of many throughout the county to give work to the unemployed. Orders, he says, were given by the Federal government to find employment for 1,646 men who had registered for work in this county. Sufficient projects were found to send out cards for the entire number.

Mr. Ferguson says that there are enough projects on hand now to give employment to every available man for the next sixty days, and perhaps longer. One of these of special interest to this section is the extension of the Daly City water system to the southern boundary of the district.

All this work will be paid for by the Federal government, and in some cases as much as 30 per cent of the cost of materials needed.

From now on those who enroll for work will be classified in the following order of preference: 1—Veterans with family; 2—Non-veterans with family; 3—Veterans, single; 4—Non-veterans, single.

Mr. Sam Merk, of Burlingame, is the administrative officer in San Mateo county for the Civil Works Administration. He succeeded Captain Edward McCauley, who was promoted to a Federal position in the Civil Works Administration.

LOCAL MAN VICTIM OF GUN ACCIDENT

While rabbit hunting with friends in the San Carlos hills last Saturday, Richard Renny, 38, of 160 Peoria street, Daly City, was accidentally shot and quite seriously injured. Renny was taken to the Community hospital and later removed to his home.

Renny was hunting rabbits, his hunting companions being John Coulman, of 1709 Alabama street, San Francisco, and J. L. Danzlae, of San Carlos. All three fired at a rabbit at the same time, it was reported, and the contents of a 12-gauge shell from Coulman's gun struck Renny in his right chest.

According to Renny's hunting companions he stepped in front of the other hunters just as they fired. Latest reports from the Renny home are that Renny is recovering satisfactorily.

Popular Couple Wed

Last Saturday evening at 5 o'clock at a very impressive wedding ceremony read by Rev. Father Doyle, in Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, Miss Beatrice Gasper became the bride of Basil Foppiano, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Foppiano, of Evergreen avenue. Miss Gasper is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gasper, of Commercial avenue, South San Francisco, who is a well-known and popular dancing teacher in her home city. A reception for the bride and groom was held at the home of Mrs. J. Thone, a sister of the bride. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Foppiano, better known as Buster Foppiano, wish them much happiness in their journey together through life.

Executive Board Meeting

The regular meeting of the executive board of Crocker P. T. A. was held at the home of Mrs. J. E. Walker on Frankfort street. The ladies discussed very thoroughly ways and means for the coming year and have several interesting plans to discuss before the next meeting. At the end of the meeting Mrs. Walker served delicious refreshments.

LOCAL MERCHANTS NAME COMMITTEES

The regular monthly meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association was held in the City Hall Auditorium last Wednesday evening. President R. T. McHale presided.

Standing committees for the ensuing year were appointed. Considerable time was spent in discussing the feasibility of having an open-air Christmas tree, but it was finally decided to wait until some more prosperous time.

The Association went on record as favoring the movement of the Voters' League to furnish Christmas baskets for those in need, and the Secretary was instructed to inform the Voters' League of the action taken.

Dr. F. P. Callen made a final report of the activities of the committee on the "Buy at Home" campaign. A great deal of good work was done by the committee, much of which was due to the efforts of President McHale and Dr. Callen.

Retiring President Andrew Vierno was presented a beautiful traveling case, in appreciation of the service he has given to the Merchants' Association as President for the last four years.

A drive will be made to increase the membership in the near future. The present membership roll shows one hundred members.

All merchants, business, and professional men are welcome at these meetings. The next meeting will be held on the first Wednesday evening in January, 1934.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

The month of December is an exceptionally busy one for the American Legion Auxiliary, with welfare projects, Christmas parties in hospital wards, and Christmas parties for their own members. Hospital, rehabilitation and child welfare work are stressed now more than at any time during the year. In addition to its own program covering these activities, each unit contributes as generously as it can to the department chairmen who see to it that no non-compensated veteran or his family is neglected during the holiday season.

We have approximately five thousand men in government hospitals in California, with a large number in county hospitals, whom we must not forget.

The program which we are continuing and substantially carrying out this year will mean that every hospitalized veteran will be remembered by this department with a gift, carrying with it a uniform Christmas greeting. "From your American Legion Auxiliary."

Every unit is busy getting ready to provide many needed things in the homes of veterans who are in the hospital. That these homes may be made more comfortable and cheerful at this holiday season is the aim of every unit in the Department of California.

The Department of California is very proud and happy to have our Junior Past Department President, Lorenzo Goode, appointed as National Area E Child Welfare Chairman. Mrs. Lorena Goode has done outstanding work in this department here in California and we know she will continue to do so for our national organization. G. J. H.

CROCKER P. T. A. TO HOLD INTERESTING MEETING

Everyone is invited to attend the next meeting of the Crocker P. T. A. at the General Pershing school P. T. A. room on Tuesday, December 12, at 2 P. M. Plans for the new year will be discussed and a very interesting meeting is promised. Mrs. F. M. Stanger, of Burlingame, First Vice-President of Seventeenth District and head of the program service of the District will be present with her assistant, Mrs. Hoelle, and both will speak. The subject of their talks will deal with "Parent Education" and "Handicapped Children."

An interesting musical and Christmas program has been arranged, which all are expecting to enjoy, after which refreshments will be served.

Entertains P. T. A. Members

On Wednesday, December 6, Mrs. Abbott, Magazine and Emblem chairman of the Crocker P. T. A., served a very tasty luncheon at her home on Bellevue avenue. Those who attended the luncheon and whist afterwards are to receive the Parent-Teacher magazine for one year. Among those who attended were the magazine chairmen of the Seventeenth District, Mrs. H. H. Burns, of San Mateo, and Seventeenth District Emblem chairman Mrs. Helen Gothan, of Burlingame. Everyone left with the feeling that the luncheon was a great success.

APPROVE PROJECT FOR UNEMPLOYED

Projects in San Mateo county providing 394,830 hours of work at a cost of $218,866 for labor, were approved last Tuesday afternoon by the San Mateo county board of supervisors, meeting in Redwood City, to keep the county's unemployed at work.

Of the majority of these projects, the Civil Works Administration of the Federal government is providing the great bulk of the labor costs and a considerable portion of the supervision and material costs. The greatest project of the twenty-one approved by the board was one totaling $57,000 for the Colma creek sewerage.

Sam D. Merk, who was confirmed as permanent director of the county's relief forces by the board last Monday, said that such projects as these will keep San Mateo county's unemployed busy.

Louis Tournahu, San Bruno garbage collector, was warned by the board that unless he adhere to the proper fill and cover method for the dumping of garbage behind the Lawndale cemeteries, his permit would be revoked.

District Attorney Edmund Scott was instructed by the board to institute condemnation proceedings for the acquiring of twenty-one parcels of land for the extension of the Junipero Serra boulevard from Colma to Lawndale.

Resurfacing of the Sharp's Park road was ordered as a temporary repair until spring, when the road will be given a permanent pavement.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A.

The regular meeting of the General Pershing P. T. A. was held last Tuesday at the General Pershing school, with Mrs. A. Eason, the president, acting as the presiding officer.

Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, district character education chairman, was the guest speaker, and gave a very interesting talk on child welfare and character building. All who were present were given pleasant food for thought.

The chairmen of membership, recreation, pin and emblem, magazine and sunshine all gave splendid reports.

Mrs. L. Landini donated a beautiful patchwork quilt to the association. The proceeds from it will be used for a student aid fund.

Mrs. A. Eason, president, is very happy to announce that her executive board is 100 per cent in California Parent-Teacher magazine subscriptions.

A silver fir tree was purchased for the school to carry out the Christmas spirit.

Social events of interest to the General Pershing P. T. A. membership and friends which are to be held in the school are as follows: December 20, at 1 o'clock, a luncheon and white elephant whist for 35c. with Mrs. F. Gaiter as chairman; December 21, at 1 o'clock, Christmas bags will be filled for the school children's Christmas party.

Every school day a hot lunch is being served to the children for 10c, consisting of a hot dish, bread and butter, milk or chocolate and a dessert. This work is being carried on by volunteer members of the General Pershing P. T. A. The interested public is welcome to visit the cafeteria at any time.

A very fine program was put on by Mrs. A. Pape's class during this month's meeting.

Miss Engle's kindergarten class will have the banner for the month for having the most mothers present.

STARS TANGLE AT TANFORAN TRACK

Route stars tangle Saturday, December 9, in Tanforan's tenth stake, the $1,500 added Golden Gate Handicap at a mile and an eighth. Eleven stakes were scheduled for the forty-day Fall meeting.

Ten thoroughbreds were nominated for Saturday's route skirmish. Nine of them are pointing for the fixture. The mail nomination of the four-year-old Jimmy Suro was received but he is not on the grounds.

The Golden Gate Handicap will headline a sparkling card being arranged by Racing Secretary Jack B. Campbell. Supporting it will be a special two mile race. This will be one of a series of distance events at Tanforan. The last one was at a mile and a half. The final one will be on "getaway" day, December 16, and will be at two miles and three-sixteenths.

Supremacy in the handicap division here has not been clearly established. The Golden Gate Handicap should do much toward establishing the champion at the meeting.

Teralice and Trombone, a pair of thoroughbred aces from Harry Unna's "sea horse" collection, have been nominated. Teralice was four times second in handicaps and rolled this record into five last Saturday, but was placed first when Bonny Grafton was disqualified.

Bonny Grafton, a dazzling three-year-old filly, was never sharper in her life. She goes Saturday.

Boardwalk, two time surprise handicap winner at the Tanforan meeting, will find much support in the Golden Gate. She has been given a weeks' rest.

Another formidable threat is the race will be Bahamas, which is prepping nicely for the handicap.

Other nominations include Guardrail, Golden Title, Prince Peace and Boy Painter.

AUTO SMASHES HYDRANT

Thursday was Thanksgiving Day, but in the midst of turkey and its accompanying good things the local police department were called upon to find out who struck the water hydrant and released the flood in the neighborhood of Alexander and Roosevelt avenues about 4:30 P. M. Chief of Police John T. Doyle and other members of the department, accompanied by the superintendent of the water company, A. J. Bodien, and his crew of men, got on the job and stopped the flood.

Through a neighbor the license number of the automobile was checked up by a telephone call to the motor vehicle department in Sacramento. The driver of the car was Charles Oster, of Irvington street. He was driving the car of a friend and crashed into the hydrant.

Extra Patrolmen for the Bayshore Highway

Theodore Roche, state motor vehicle commissioner, returned on Saturday after a conference in Sacramento, and reported the state was determined to properly police the Bayshore highway with the view of ending the ever-increasing list of fatalities on that highway.

"This highway must be properly safeguarded," Roche said, "and the state authorities agree with me that steps must be taken to insure safety there. We have already assigned five additional men from other counties to do duty on this highway. Just as soon as funds permit, we will have more men patrolling the highway."

PRESIDENT GIVEN POPULAR BACKING

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

With Congress soon to convene, alignment of the forces favoring the monetary policy of President Roosevelt and those opposed to his enlightened attitude is well under way. The sentiment of the country has pretty well crystallized in support of the chief executive of the nation, for it is felt RECOVERY can only be achieved by the success of the gold purchasing procedure of the Federal Government.

The President's plan is highly constructive and its enemies have been unable to find any vital flaw in it. The chief objection along the lines that all the details of the plan have not been made public likely will be removed in a short time, as indications are a complete explanation of the why and wherefore of the method will be issued in a few days.

Independent thinkers are flocking to the banner of President Roosevelt and every day finds his position growing stronger. Stalwarts of the type of United States Senator William E. Borah of Idaho have pointed out pertinently enough that none of the critics of the President's monetary policy had offered anything in its place except a return to the gold standard. The Senator recently said: "I doubt if the critics of the President's monetary policy will succeed in winning public opinion away from the President unless they are prepared to offer an affirmative, constructive program. The thing that holds the people to the President is the belief that he deeply desires to lift them out of their desperate troubles."

"We had the gold standard for three and one-half years of the depression. We should have had the confidence which it is said now waits on the return of the gold standard. But confidence was not at hand, prices continued to fall, unemployment to increase, until on the third day of March this nation was in a state of economic collapse."

"The advocates of the gold standard stood about the bier of American industry and American agriculture speechless—not a word of hope, not a note of leadership. The great bankers and financiers offered no remedy. Complete national liquidation in all its stark and hideous aspects stared us in the face."

"The only thing that is offered now by the critics of the President is a return to the gold standard and apparently the program which marked the gloomy days from October 1929, to March 3, 1933."

That the President is proceeding along conservative lines must be admitted by even his most rabid "knockers." As an editorial in the San Francisco Daily News recently put it, the monetary policy of the administration acts as a buffer against probable printing press inflation by Congress if the moderate Roosevelt gold trading policy fails to work.

As the News says, President Roosevelt is trying to avoid two extremes: one, the extreme gold policy which doubled the value of the March, 1933, dollar in terms of 1926 purchasing power, which prevented debtors from paying their debts and which depressed prices to disastrous levels; the other, uncontrolled inflation of the printing press type.

Citizens should think over this wise observation of the News:

"While the critics are calling the President names for his restrained efforts to reflate the dollar to a real sound money level, they ignore the fact that continued deflation would almost inevitably swing the country to support of the printing press panacea. The President should get the support rather than the opposition of those who fear extreme inflation."

The most reasonable point of view in the difficult situation leads to whole hearted support of the conservative policy of the President. Debtors must be given a fighting chance. Ruthless foreclosure must not be allowed to continue.

HELP THE UNDERNOURISHED

The executive board of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association will hold a regular meeting at the Woodrow Wilson school next Tuesday afternoon, December 12, at 2 o'clock. All members are welcome. There will be a kitchen shower at this meeting to help furnish the kitchen for feeding undernourished children. It is hoped to get this work started as soon as possible. Much help is also being given through student aid. Several affairs will be given before the close of the present school term.

The regular meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon, December 19, at 2:15 o'clock.

LEGION MEMBERS VISIT ALAMEDA

The first meeting of the Second Area of the Department of California, American Legion, was held in the War Memorial of Alameda, Sunday, December 3.

The morning session was devoted to the reports of the District Commanders of the Area, and a short talk on membership by Department Commander Homer Chailleux.

At noon a parade, led by the massed colors, followed by Memory Post No. 399 band and the Thirteenth District, Golden Gate Post No. 40 drum corps, and the Seventh and Eighth Districts, and Berkeley Post No. 7 drum and bugle corps, and the Ninth and Tenth Districts marched from the War Memorial to the Alameda Hotel, where luncheon was served.

The afternoon session was given over to the reports of Department committee chairmen, among whom were: Americanism, Archie Closson; National Defence, Tex Frolic; Aeronautics, Dudley Steele; and Radio Broadcasts, Louis Towne.

Comrade Phil Solon spoke on the accomplishments of the special review boards.

Department Adjutant James Fisk reported on the National Commanders and Adjutants' conference.

Department Commander Homer Chailleux gave a complete report of the National convention, in his own dynamic manner.

The next Area meeting will be held in San Mateo in March, with the eighth District as hosts.

A joint Seventh and Eighth District meeting will be held in the main auditorium of the San Francisco War Memorial, Friday evening, December 15. The Post Commanders of the Seventh and Eighth Districts will be called on to report the membership standing of their Posts, as this will be the close of the December quota. The guest of honor will be Department Commander Homer Chailleux.

All Legionnaires, Auxiliary members and their friends are invited to attend this meeting.

Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, will hold their next regular meeting in Legion Hall, next Wednesday night, December 13. Be sure to be there, as the various chairmen will have some interesting reports, and Comrade Miller, as social chairman, has some exceptional entertainment to offer. L. M. H.

VETERAN FIREMEN MEET

The Veteran Firemen of Daly City held their regular monthly meeting on Friday, December 1, President James Callen presiding. Besides the regular order of business the nomination and election of officers took place. The following comrades were nominated and elected for the ensuing year: President H. W. A. Rickman, 1st Vice-President Gus Shenk, 2nd Vice-President A. L. Hilton, Chaplain H. H. Smith, Secretary Edward J. Ford, Treasurer A. J. Green, Marshall Ed L. Heim. The newly elected officers will be installed at the meeting in January.

A number of Veteran Firemen of Daly City attended the funeral of late comrade J. W. Parry, Past President of Veteran Firemen Association of San Francisco on Tuesday, December 5. Comrade Perry was well known to the Daly City firemen, being a visitor here on numerous occasions.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Harry Mapes, of 1075 Hanover street sponsored a birthday party recently in honor of her daughter Marjorie, who celebrated her eighth birthday on November 15. The table was artistically decorated in pink and yellow. Marjorie received many gifts from her friends, who wished her many more happy birthdays. There were twenty-one kiddies present, including Virginia Adams, Ruth Basso, Betty Sheridan, Marion Boyd, Doris Irvine, Gloria Urton, Rita Alessandro, June Felsch, Shirley Getler, Jacqueline Leraci, Victoria Filios, Ethel Duelfer, Pety Brewer, Louise Miller, Charles Johnson, Palmer Johnson, Robert Bowen, Donald Mehan, Victor Gould, Dean Miller, Marion Mapes. There were seven mothers present, Mrs. Robert Miller, of Oakland, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. Tupper Mehan, Mrs. Grant Bowen, Mrs. Vern Gould, Mrs. Lee Miller and Mrs. Harry Mapes.

AID FOR COUNTY TEACHERS

Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools, has announced that plans are being made to give work to unemployed teachers in San Mateo county. New classes are to be started in various sections of the county where these teachers will be placed for part time teaching.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By the Journalism Class.)

Scores of Jefferson students were among the thousands who attended the now well known Eagles and Hawk football game held at Kezar Stadium, November 24. The game was played for the benefit of the Welfare fund, Second district, Congress of Parents and Teachers. The members of the teams playing under the Eagles came from Galileo, Mission, and Balboa, while the Hawks were from Polytechnic, Commerce, and Lowell. All those who attended were well pleased with the results.

Under the Civil Works Administration of the Federal government, six men have been assigned to the high school to grade and landscape the grounds around the building. A road is to be made around the rear of the building, continuing at the fence on the north side. The road is to be extended to the opening of the football field. Sidewalks are to be made and additional work is being done in planting around the football grounds.

Mr. Ferguson states, "The work is being done at no cost to the high school district. In about eleven weeks the work will be completed as approved by the Civil Works Administration." Mr. Matt Jensen donated his services as engineer in making the plans and specifications for this work. We are sure that the new improvements will be greatly appreciated by students of the school and residents of the high school district.

Now that the football season of Jefferson has closed, it is time to wonder about next year's prospects. With Roy Beecher, Dave Johnston, Ray Gomes, Bert Wester, Howard Capps, James Swan, Jack Gerstenberg, and Bill Grantham graduating, the greater part of the first string and the heavier part, the chances for a winning season will be less. However, with some of the old veterans left and the prospect for new material Jefferson will probably hold her own on the gridiron.

The line-up for next year will most likely be as follows: Jack Bellato and Mervin Flick, ends; Aubert Guisti and Stoddard Bright, tackles; Harry Prongos and Aldo Malaspina, guards; Wesley Fulton or Norbert Pfeiffer, center; Roy Burns and Louis Nannini, halfbacks; Angel Torres, quarterback; fullback, unknown.

Just before the Thanksgiving vacation, the Dancing Club sponsored their first dance in the auditorium. About thirty students were present. It is hoped that a larger group will come in the future. Everyone had a most enjoyable afternoon. The dancing was from 3:15 to 4:45.

THE BIBLE

When trials seem the hardest,
And my soul is tempted so,
There's a little book lying on my desk;
To it I go.

Oh, what blessed peace it brings me.
It makes my cup run o'er.
Deep in my soul it brings
Sunshine, joy and peace as never before.

"Lay aside every weight, it tells me,
"Make straight paths for your feet;
I'll never, never, leave Thee."

Victory comes at once complete.

For each cloud it brings a rainbow;
For each trial it gives a song.
'Tis a blessed old Book,
I could read it all day long.

It is a light to my pathway,
And a lamp to my feet.
It is a comfort to my heart,
When I'm passing through waters deep—the Bible.

Here are three definitions of the Bible. First, the Bible is the sacred book of the Christian religion. Second, the Bible is a divinely directed record—historical, psychological, and inspirational. Third, a laboratory note book of human life. The Bible is centered about one great person—Christ.

The Grace Church of the Nazarene is the Bible center of Daly City. There the Bible is being taught to an average of 180 every Sunday morning. All ages attend this school, which is divided into three departments. Each department has its own opening and closing exercises. John R. Young, the school superintendent, is puzzled as to what to do with so many pupils when the church building is so small. Looks like another building will have to be erected on the vacant lot by the church. It is a crime to have children who want a Christian education and not have space to accommodate them. Even folding chairs would help the cause some until a little building can be erected. As more become interested the school can move on.

Rev. Roy F. Snee, District Superintendent, gave a wonderful message last Sunday on "Unstaggering Faith." The services throughout the day were well attended, according to Rev. J. M. Gill, pastor.

The church will observe Universal Bible Sunday, on Sunday, December 10. All Bible lovers are urged to be present.

Flood Trial in January

Unwilling to have the holidays break the continuity of the trial, attorneys for Constance May Gavin and the James L. Flood estate last Tuesday stipulated that retrial of her claim to a daughters' share of the Flood millions shall begin January 8.

First Federal Relief Checks

Checks totaling $6,075 were paid out last Saturday by the Civil Works Administration of San Mateo county, the recipients being 650 men from the ranks of the unemployed.

STATE ENRICHED BY RACING MEET

Racing fans had wagered $1,485,053 during the first twenty-nine days of the forty-day Fall meeting at the Tanforan track. This figure is up to and including the racing of December 3.

It is expected that the total figure for the meeting will top two million dollars. The state of California has already received $51,209.72 as its share of revenue from the pari-mutuel machines.

The daily pari-mutuel "handle" has steadily increased. The rise has not been by leaps and bounds, but is steady, and reflects a mounting interest in the sport at this course.

The average daily "handle" for the first twenty-nine days is $51,209.72. The top "handle" was $32,592 on Community Chest day, when the entire proceeds were donated to the San Francisco Community Chest.

Charity in this sector has been given more than $15,000, according to Ralph C. MacArthur, general manager of the Tanforan Company, Ltd. This was accomplished by means of Sunday racing.

Two important handicaps will be run on the remaining Saturdays at the meeting. These two days are expected to swell materially the pari-mutuel figures.

Ten thoroughbreds have been nominated for the $1,500 added Golden Gate Handicap, at a mile and an eighth next Saturday. The $5,000 added San Francisco Handicap will wind up the meeting December 16.

The thoroughbreds which are slated to clash in the Golden Gate Handicap include Terallice, Trombone, Guardrail, Golden Title, Prince Pest, Board-walker, Bonny Grafton, Bahamas and Boy Painter. The mail nomination of Jimmy Sutro was received but he is not on the grounds.

A supporting attraction at two miles is being arranged for next Saturday by Racing Secretary Jack B. Campbell.

SHOULD ENLIST IN WAR AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

Every child born today loses more than one year of life through tuberculosis, according to a statement from the California Tuberculosis Association, in an appeal to purchase Christmas Seals.

The statement continued: "Almost an entire year of life has been added to the general average duration of life by our successful battle against tuberculosis during the past decade, between 1920 and 1930. About another year's gain stands to the credit of the previous decade. These are great, but tuberculosis still stands as one of the most important causes of death, mainly because of the age period in which its deaths are concentrated. This disease is still the leading cause of death between the ages of 15 and 45, the years of most productive life. Tuberculosis remains the greatest economic burden among diseases."

"A male child born today would lose 1.85 per cent of his remaining years of life; a female child 1.73 per cent. As one grows older the years of life lost grow less because of the shorter expectancy of life, but the average loss is over one year."

"We sometimes lose sight of the extent of tuberculosis because some of us are never touched by it. We forget that we might contract the disease, suffer many years and die, not two, but many years before the age to which we might have lived. Of course it is possible to spread the years of life lost through tuberculosis over the entire population, but this average illustrates the still great incidence of the disease at the present time."

"With tuberculosis both preventable and curable, the need for the successful continuance of the fight against tuberculosis was never so great as at the present time. The complete control and eradication of this most costly of diseases is in sight."

IT WASN'T MEANT TO TRAP INSECTS, BUT IT'S EFFECTIVE

The effectiveness of light as a weapon for the extermination of insects has just been proved again at the demonstration home of the Potomac Edison Company in Martinsburg, West Virginia. Within the past three months 290,000 moths, half of them destructive to crops, have been trapped and killed in a glass-topped box 25 feet long by six inches wide and containing 60-watt lamps at six-inch intervals. And the best part of the story is that the box was not intended to be an insect trap; it was designed to test the use of small lamps as substitutes for floodlights.

Beery to Visit San Mateo
Invitations from the Hollywood trio, consisting of Paul Mantz, Frank Clarke and Howard Batt, famous screen stunt fliers, have been accepted by Wallace Beery, film star and aviator, to visit San Mateo for the Pacific International Air Pageant, on December 16 and 17, at Curtiss-Wright flying field, San Mateo, according to advices received from Mantz.

ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Roy B. Deaton, Mills field pilot, who was injured when his plane made a forced landing on the hills near South San Francisco on October 13, has sufficiently recovered to leave the hospital.

Albert Moklofsky, 68, San Mateo painting contractor, was fatally injured in a fall from the roof of an Atherton building, last Saturday.

Charles Calletti, of San Francisco, was killed and Mrs. Marie Colletti and Karl Ekman were injured when the automobile in which they were riding overturned and struck a telegraph pole.

The American Dredging Company of San Francisco has been awarded the contract for constructing a dredger fill for the easterly approach of the San Francisco-Oakland bridge. The company submitted a low bid of $869,063 for the project.

A report that Mrs. Sisevich, San Mateo matron who died in prison at Tehachapi, had starved to death is being investigated by San Mateo county authorities.

Acid from a fire extinguisher which backfired caused the death of Salvador Perez, 30, at Bakersfield. Perez was believed to have swallowed the acid when it sprayed into his face.

Thirty days in jail was the sentence imposed upon Webster Tappin, of San Francisco, following his conviction on a charge of beating his stepdaughter, Shirley Walters, 22 months old.

Severe burns and lacerations were received by Myron Lees, 16-year-old student at McClymonds high school, Oakland, when chemicals exploded in the school laboratory.

Owing to an increase in the allowable output for the state, California's oil production, which had been cut sharply in the preceding week, increased last week, averaging 465,150 barrels daily, compared with 444,000 in the preceding week.

Employment of steel workers on the Marin tower of the Golden Gate bridge brought the total number of men employed on the project to 515 last Monday, the largest since the work was started.

The San Mateo unemployment relief committee will receive a major portion of the $2,177 derived from a charity racing meet held Sunday at Tanforan.

THIS LAMP CAN BE PINNED ANYWHERE ON YOUR WALLS

The latest device for supplementary lighting in the home is the "Pin-It-Up" lamp, which may be pinned on the wall wherever extra illumination is desired. This unit consists of a cord, bracket, socket, lamp and shade, but weighs less than a pound all told. Necessary pins come with it, and they leave no scars on the walls. Brackets and shades may be had in various colors to fit in with any decorative scheme. "Pin-It-Up" lamps are distributed by the General Electric Supply Company.

The Literary Digest is suing the New York Times for $450,000, because the Times published the Digest's final poll on the New York election a day ahead of the release date. Inasmuch as the poll cost the Digest about $100,000, it does seem that all daily newspapers should have been ethical enough not to publish the figures until the date on which they had permission to do so. The outcome of this suit will be awaited with interest, especially by publishers.

A jury trying Alex English of Denver on a murder charge was given its choice of going to church or to a theater as a week-end diversion. They chose a picture show.

BENEFIT WHIST TO BE HELD THURSDAY IN AUDITORIUM

Thursday evening, December 14, a benefit whist will be held in the Daly City Auditorium. The proceeds from this whist will go to the widow and three children of the late Ragnar Nordgren. Mrs. Nordgren was an overseas World war veteran, and a member of Old Glory Post, V. F. W. Let us not forget our duty to those who are in distress. Always strive to make this a better world in which to live by lending a helping hand whenever and wherever we see or hear of a worthy cause for our help. Buy the tickets for this whist when you are approached, and know the thrill of perfect satisfaction in being able to help some one more unfortunate than yourself.

More than 29,577 miles of state highways were surfaced during 1932.

Why Get Up Nights?

Make This 25c Test.

Lax the bladder as you would the bowels. Drive out impurities and excessive acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Get a 25 cent box of BU-KETS, the bladder laxative, from any drug store. After four days if you are not relieved of getting up nights, go back and get your money. BU-KETS, containing buchu leaves, juniper oil, etc., acts pleasantly to castor oil on the bowels. If you are bothered with backache, or leg pains caused from bladder disorders, you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. McGraw's Pharmacy says BU-KETS is a best seller.

PROHIBITION LAW IS IN THE DISCARD

The measure finally repealing the eighteenth amendment, the prohibition law, was signed and went into effect last Tuesday, December 5, at 6:55 P. M., Acting Secretary of State William Phillips signing the formal proclamation of ratification.

President Roosevelt, in officially proclaiming prohibition repeal, Tuesday night, appealed to the American people for temperance and law observance to prevent a return of "repugnant conditions" of the old days. He specifically asked:

That no state permit the return of the saloon "either in its old form or in some modern guise."

That every citizen purchase alcoholic beverages only from licensed dealers or agencies, to eliminate the bootlegger and provide revenues for support of the government.

That the American people not bring upon themselves "the curse of the excessive use of intoxicating liquors, to the detriment of health, morals and social integrity."

Be Elegant, Is Fashion's Message

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

the strictly tailored short jacketed velvet suit which looks smartest when topped with a beret of its very own velvet.

Lelong, who always dresses the young fille so beautifully presents the model posed to the left in the group. It is done in black net and Lyons velvet. The corded velvet finishing on the net flouncing is repeated on the shoulder. The fact that this young woman is wearing a handsome glittering necklace and bracelet should be taken into account for fashion regards rich jewelry ensembles such as this as a necessary luxury and proper finesse to every formal costume.

NOTHING in the way of sumptuous fabrics, fine laces, precious furs, glittering embroideries and gleaming jewels is too luxurious to satisfy fashion's ambition this season. The bringing back of the formal afternoon velvet suit is perhaps one of the most significant events in this mode of elegance.

As every style-conscious woman knows when the velvet daytime suit de luxe is in fashion there is a lot that must be lived up to in the way of endless accessory elegancies. In proof of which we refer you to the charming little outfit which costumes the young modern seated in the group pictured.

The velvet which fashions this modish two-piece is a super-quality Lyons type. The fur is black skunk which was considered a most popular trimming in early Victorian days. The frill of fine lace down the front and peeping from beneath the fur-cuffed sleeves matches the lace of the blouse. Of course you have noticed how like a quaint basque of yore are the lines of the pet little snug-fitting jacket. The wee chapeau is in perfect keeping with the theme.

Another trend in velvet daytime fashions which should be mentioned because of its importance this season is that of the fur-bordered tunic suit. The opportunities for fur and velvet opulence offered is beyond wildest flights of imagination. Then there is as a necessary luxury and proper finesse to every formal costume.

If conclusive evidence be needed that this is a season in which fashion creators have become luxury-conscious to a marked degree, here you have it in the regal evening gown posed in the foreground of our illustration. American beauty velvet richly embroidered with gold and jeweled stones fashions this exquisite mode. The tunic line continues gracefully into a fish tail train lined with pink satin.

While the average woman may not be aspiring to the super formality which this gorgeous gown bespeaks yet it may be accepted as interpretative as to certain style trends which may be tuned to occasions more or less formal. For instance the American beauty tone of the velvet employed verifies word from Paris that deep warm colorings in purple and reddish key such as the very new blackberry and aubergine and various wine shades are in the ascendancy. Also the prestige of velvet as medium-supreme for dinner and evening gowns is here re-affirmed. Then, too, the tunic theme introduced reflects the elaborate jewel and gold embroidery is indicative of the mood which fashion is in to trim velvet with beguiling touches of beadwork and kindred effects.

CAPES BACK AGAIN IN LATEST STYLES

Capes are back again. Little waist length capes appear with daytime and dinner gowns. Hip-length capes of fur or wool are worn with street costumes. Long cloaks are swept about the most regal evening gowns.

Hip-length capes for both daytime and evening wear are the newest fashion note. They appear in fur, wool and silk treated to new tricks.

Heim uses rich bronze seal and galyak tinted a new gold beige called "chrome" to make striking hip-length capes for daytime wear. Sometimes they are worn with a muff and toque to match, again they appear with wool accessories matching the frock.

Chanel designs hip and three-quarter length wool capes for sports and travel wear. Deep green-ribbed wool frocks and suits appear with loose capes of the same fabric, swinging from the shoulders.

Schlaparelli adds the hip-length cape to the evening style picture, with a striking model of bright Peiping red taffeta having a quilted effect, worn with a slender gown of silver gray satin.

Diadems and Headbands

Grace Evening Coiffures

Sweet young things struggling with hair in the "between permanents" stage, find in the evening coiffure a maddening problem. Vionet, Lanvin, and other designers have taken pity on their plight by creating diadems and headbands which transform an ordinary "bank of hair" into a thing of loveliness. The girl with the too-round face will look positively ethereal and Gish-like when she bedecks her tresses with the Russian type of diadem. The woman whose features incline to the classic gains becoming dignity with the Grecian type of head-dress. Either is the quintessence of chic for wear with the season's most ravishing evening gowns.

Separate Skirts

There is always a place in the mode for the smartly fashioned separate skirt. It is a favorite of the college girl, for with a skirt or two and enough blouses, she can give an endless variety to her wardrobe.

BROWN AND WHITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

No, this lovely evening wrap is not going to be described as featuring the usual black and white contrast. On the contrary the handsome velvet which fashions this stunning wrap-around short coat is in a deep rich brown. You can scarcely vision how perfectly stunning white ermine is with brown velvet unless you see this wrap which Molyneux has created in the original. The newest evening colors trend to rich dark hues, especially radiant browns and wine tones and greens so dark they look almost black. There is a new blackberry shade which many designers are using instead of black this season.

Broad Shoulder Fashion Is Marked for Oblivion

Designers are already making provision for the passing of the broad shoulder. It is doomed to die within the next three months, according to their astute reckoning.

One coat maker has evolved a brilliant scheme. He is offering coats with collapsible shoulder peaks. On the day of the broad-shoulder's funeral, all you need do to be in fashion's swim is to remove the padding from the specially treated armhole and have the points stitched down.

RIGHT TACKLE

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service

NO ONE knew why Red Whitten was kept on the Huckleby varsity football squad.

There were dozens of other players who could have done a better job in Red's position at right tackle. Nobody could understand it, especially because toward the end of the season it began to look as if Huckleby was due for a shot at the eastern championship.

The student body declared it was unfair.

Not one of them but that had a friend on the squad who would have leaped at the opportunity Red was getting.

For Red, it was plain to see, was poor—that is, when you compared him with some of the other tackles. The sports reporters mentioned it in their columns, at first in a humorous vein, later more seriously.

It was obvious, wrote they, that Red Whitten, Huckleby's right tackle, would be more beneficial to the team warming the bench. One or two hinted that the grinning crimson-shocked youth must have some sort of drag; that that drag would probably prove the snag in Huckleby's climb to the eastern championship.

Fans were more bold in condemning the smiling red-head.

They paid good money to behold the outrage, hence their tongues were not held in check by scruples.

They hooted and howled and belittled insults.

They demanded that Red be removed.

They shrieked curses at stolid Coach Quale.

But to it all, stolid Coach Quale turned a deaf ear.

He grinned at the reporters; he froze the student body into respectful silence with a look; he ignored the fans—and continued to play Red Whitten in every game.

Continued to play Red Whitten, and continued to chalk up one victory after another for "dear old Huckleby."

It wasn't until the faculty, impressed by the combined condemnations of the student body, fans and press notices, demanded an accounting from Coach Quale, that the veteran of the countless gridiron battles offered an explanation.

Upon the faculty depended his job; and a job these days was a job.

"It looks bad, Quale," Prof. Parker Rogers said by way of apology. "They're hinting that Red Whitten has some kind of drag. And that, as you know, is bad for our reputation. I don't pretend to tell you your business, but—well, the Briersley game is scheduled for next Saturday, and if we beat Briersley, the eastern championship goes to Huckleby."

Coach Quale smiled indulgently. "Has it ever occurred to you, Professor Rogers, that Huckleby has won every game she's played this fall, despite the fact that Red Whitten has been in at tackle?"

"Surely you don't attribute Huckleby's record this fall to Whitten?"

"That's exactly what I do, professor. Now listen." Coach Quale took hold of Professor Rogers' arm in chummy fashion and led him to a secluded corner of the locker room.

"Professor," he went on, "you're head of the psychology department here at Huckleby, hence you must have an understanding of human nature. I'm glad they sent you to question me, for I believe you'll be satisfied with what I have to say."

"In football," Coach Quale continued, "as in every other sport, a team must have a 'spark-plug.'"

And when Professor Rogers looked slightly bewildered, the veteran of the gridiron continued:

"A spark-plug, professor, is the backbone of every team. He's the morale, so to speak. Usually he's a jolly, laughing chap. A good sport. A fighter. A man who never says die. A boy who goes into every game with just one object in mind—to do his best, and to win. Unconsciously he radiates confidence and courage. He never loses his head. In a pinch he acts like he does when there's a clear field ahead. It's only inevitable that this man must have a steady influence on his mates. They know he can be depended upon for clear thinking, sensible advice, a low spoken word of courage, a ready smile."

"Red Whitten is our 'spark-plug.' We've been without a man like him for four years, and for four years we've lost the championship. This year, with Red injecting that never-say-die spirit into the boys, we're on the road to victory."

Coach Quale finished his oration, breathing a little heavily.

But he saw the look of understanding in Professor Rogers' eyes and knew he'd won his point.

The suspense of the mental strain resulting from the anticipation of this moment was only now revealing itself.

Professor Rogers nodding thoughtfully, said: "I see what you're driving at, coach. I understand. But it will be hard trying to convince half a million interested people that you're right."

Coach Quale smiled and stood up. "That," he said, "will have to come later—after we've won the championship, for it would never do now to try to explain. The team doesn't realize the full significance of Red's influence. It wouldn't be wise to tell them, or try to convince the student body or the press or anyone else. They wouldn't understand."

He laid a hand on the professor's arm. "If you think it's hard on the fans, think of Red Whitten. Think of the abuse he's standing—never a word of praise or encouragement, never a cheer; yet he goes into every game with the same determined spirit, the same cheerful grin, the same willingness to do the best he knows how. Think of Red Whitten, professor."

There were four days left before the game with Briersley—the game that would decide the eastern championship.

Four days in which Coach Quale put his charges through an additional course of training.

Four days in which the press berated the Huckleby coach unmercifully when it was learned that Red Whitten was slated to fill the right tackle's berth.

Four days in which a hundred fan letter poured into the Huckleby administration office, beseeching the authorities to demand Red's discharge from the squad.

And on the third day Red Whitten slipped and sprained his ankle.

Coach Quale sent the youth to the locker room; a half hour later he himself followed.

Gravely he stared down at the swollen ankle; talked with Doc Ruggles, and ten minutes after made a decision, the importance of which was lost on every one, save, perhaps, Prof. Parker Rogers.

Red Whitten would not play against Briersley!

The press made no bones about identifying the announcement as good news.

The student body grinned contentedly, albeit furtively. The fans cheered.

On the fifth day, Friday, Coach Quale and his squad decamped for the Briersley athletic field.

A half hour before train time the coach ran up to Red Whitten's room, found the youth seated beside a window from which point the railroad station was plainly visible.

"Sorry, Red," was all the coach said, and silently gripped the boy's hand.

Red grinned. "Just come back with that championship. That's all I care."

A record crowd filled the stands.

There was a bracing quality in the air.

There was an atmosphere of merriment and eager anticipation.

The referee's whistle shrieked at exactly 2:15.

The stands rose en masse at the kick-off.

The quarter ended with the score 6-0, Briersley top.

At the half they had increased the lead to 13-0.

Something was wrong.

Huckleby's stands were sober. . . .

Something gone wrong.

The team wasn't playing up to snuff.

A slip somewhere.

In the locker room Coach Quale looked at his charges.

They weren't a very cheerful looking bunch.

Something had gone out of them.

He spoke quietly. No talking.

would help; berating, cajoling, threatening wouldn't help. . . .

Red Whitten's grinning face crossed his mind.

He swore softly.

And at that moment a messenger entered the room. Coach Quale took the envelope; burst it open; scanned the lines. Suddenly he was reading out loud, and the team was listening.

"Hang on, gang. You can win. I'm coming down! Red."

There was a stir.

Some one grinned.

The team sat up.

Coach Quale saw the look in their eyes. He began to talk.

Red arrived near the end of the third quarter.

He came by airplane and he wore his football togs and a grin on his face.

Huckleby had already scored seven points.

Coach Quale called out Capt. Abe Otto. "Listen," he said to Abe. "I'm sending Red in next quarter."

"You're down near the line now. You'll be scoring again."

"Well, give the ball to Red and let him make the touchdown. No, don't look at me that way. I want Red to make the touchdown. Red and no one else. Give him the ball somehow. Red deserves it. Red makes the touchdown or—"

Capt. Abe Otto nodded. "All right. All right." Vaguely he understood. Only vaguely. No one understood, no one but Coach Quale, and, perhaps, Professor Rogers.

Evidence of Mongolian

Ancestry of Red Men

New evidence that the American Indians were originally a Mongolian race which migrated to North America from Asia has been traced in funeral chants and other music of surviving Indian tribes by Dr. Marius Barbeau of the Canadian national museum at Ottawa.

Says Dr. E. E. Free, in his Week's Science (New York):

"Doctor Barbeau believes that the music of many of these chants shows clear resemblances to existing music in China, but little or no resemblance to European music or to native music in other parts of the world. Doctor Barbeau has also found the resemblances to Chinese music especially marked among the Athabaska tribes of the Pacific Northwest; so much so that he suspects these tribes of being relatively recent immigrants from Asia, perhaps dating from the time of Genghis Khan."—Literary Digest.

Japan's Roads

Scene on a Japanese Highway.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WITH motor cars multiplying in Japan, the Nipponese are becoming increasingly interested in good roads. A few years ago travelers scanned railway maps when planning to tour Japan. Now, new roads linking great cities with regions of historic and scenic interest on the larger islands are diverting the attention of visitors to automobiles and improved highways.

It is possible, although, it must be confessed, sometimes slightly uncomfortable, to go by automobile throughout the length and breadth of Japan. To be sure, many of the roads are true "sunshine roads," which mean woe to him who attempts to travel them during the rainy seasons, when light bridges across flooding streams often become unsafe for heavy traffic or float away entirely; yet motoring at proper times presents only minor difficulties.

Drive along that historic Tokaido road from Yedo (Tokyo) to Kyoto, past Hakone lake, sacred Fuji, and the east seacoast. With the sharp autumn air bringing red blood tingling to your cheeks, spiral up to Chuzenji from Nikko along the zigzag road carved on the steep mountain side. Behold there the exquisite panorama of multihued maples. Climb to the mountains that gird the blue waters of Lake Towada, lush in the greenery of summer or aflame with riotous golds and reds of frost-tinted October.

Direct your car out into the country byways when summer rice planting or autumn harvest makes evident the patience and ceaseless industry of rural life. Discover for yourself charming places along the inland sea, the Fuji lake district, and elsewhere. If you take one such trip, you will agree that motoring is well worth the effort even when the roads are in poor repair.

Today, in Japan, automobile traffic is steadily expanding. If one excepts the innumerable motorcycles and three-wheeled delivery automobiles that dart about everywhere, and includes only the tiny flyweight cars, the raucous taxicabs that cruise the city streets for 50-sen fares (normally about 25 cents); the public and private automobiles, the lumbering trucks, and the long, low 18-passenger busses that overfill the narrow roadways, there are now about 70,000 motorized vehicles on Honshu Island alone, and on the four main islands a total of more than 160,000.

Better Roads for Motors.

The number of cars already in operation, together with those arriving daily at the docks and taking final shape in locally established assembly plants, is ever a pressing argument for better roads. In the first eleven months of 1932 the United States exported to Japan 2,828 busses and trucks and 2,736 passenger automobiles. The value of automobile parts exported in this same period was $2,348,665.

Every day motors are widening their sphere of activity. Treaded pneumatic tires are leaving patterns in paths which for ages knew no prints save those of bare or sandal-clad feet. Gasoline fumes mingle with the dust that rises from roadbeds heretofore powdered and rutted only by the wheels of dog, bullock, or man-drawn carts.

The roads are rapidly changing, even the historic old Tokaido from Tokyo to Kyoto, which served Japan as the Via Appia served ancient Rome. Although the old roadbed that echoed to the hoofs of horses in the grand days of chivalry has been altered, until only cobbled spots between the weathered gnarled pines and stately cryptomerias identify it, the panoramas are as delightful as ever.

Mount Fuji still stands supreme in her winter-whitened mantle or in the blue haze and shroud of cumulus clouds; the rivers still rush down from the purple hills, and the inrolling waves of the Pacific still break along the East Seacoast as in bygone years.

"There is the music of the harp in the pine trees and the sound of the timbrel in the waves; the panting of the carriers is like the sound of flutes and the stamp of the horses' feet like the boom of the drum."

Hakone Barrier Long Gone.

If Chomei were to write that portion of his Tokaido diary today, he would have to find some additional instrumental similes for the exhaust of motors and the blatant sounding of klaxons.

The old Hakone barrier gateway has been gone these 60-odd years. No more do armed sentries there challenge one and demand to see passports and credentials, as in the days when glittering trains of daimios (feudal lords) marched in ceaseless parade back and forth on this route between the courts of the shogun (generalsissimo) and emperor. Motor trekkers now stop only if they are interested in examining the age-old site. It is sheer pleasure, however, to loiter along the way and enjoy the surpassing views across the cerulean Hakone lake, which on calm days mirrors that stately mountain named by the aboriginal Ainu Fuji, the Goddess of Fire.

Not only along the Tokaido, but elsewhere as well, men with picks, shovels, and dump carts are beginning to carve wider and better trails of joy and utility through the empire.

A wide asphalt and concrete road, which connects the titan industrial city, Osaka, with the port of Kobe, is in the final stages of construction. And, mind you, "speed cops" are stationed along the way to check up on motorists trying more than the permitted 25 miles an hour!

Thus far, however, motor traffic has grown much in excess of the development of the roads and the education of the people to the innovation that is elbowing its way into the congested thoroughfares.

Persons who have become accustomed to wide macadam highways or spacious boulevards and are inclined to tread rather heavily on accelerators may find travel in Japan somewhat irksome at first. Anxiety and impatience must be left at home; otherwise the nervous strain will destroy all of the pleasures of motor vagabonding. Careful and patient driving is, of necessity, the motorist's watchword on the Japanese highways.

Not only are the roads generally narrow and full of turns, but up and down them passes a multifarious traffic. There is a constant succession of heavily laden bullock carts, bicyclists beyond count, people plodding under ponderous burdens, high-piled carts with dogs straining at leash to assist their perspiring masters to pull them, peddlers hawking their wares, trundling horse-drawn wagons, and children—babies playing in the open streets, youngsters going to and from school, hundreds of students on picnic or pilgrimage—children everywhere. And there seems to be little inclination on the part of any of them to share the road.

Probably nowhere else in the world is there such extensive "jay-walking" or such a horde of irresponsible bicyclists.

Squeeze the bulb of your horn repeatedly, then sound your electric klaxon (every motorcar is equipped with both), and still there is little movement in the traffic.

Why there is such slowness to respond to the repeated signals is hard to understand, since courtesy is one of the outstanding traits of the people. Many persons have tried to analyze the problem in the hope of finding a remedy.

Bicycles the Chief Trouble.

"How many miles we get out of our horn, and not how many miles we get out of our tires, is the question we have in Japan," a motorist resident may jokingly remark when you are discussing the subject of congestion on the roads and streets.

Give a man or boy a bicycle in Japan, where there are five and three-quarter million bicycles to be reckoned with, and he will dart about with utter abandon, entirely disregarding traffic of all kinds. Consequently, bicycles constitute easily the most serious of motorists' worries. If only the traffic police in the cities would devote to bicyclists a little of the assiduous attention they seem to think necessary in controlling motor car traffic, the situation would improve. Perhaps clearer roads are in prospect.

Irrespective of facts regarding the right of way, the motor owner usually has, as yet, the heavier responsibility in court in event of a traffic accident.

Congestion and delays that would evoke from Americans floods of vituperation leave the Japanese chauffeur outwardly unperturbed. If he speaks at all, it is probably to ask, with most profuse apologies, if the carter who blocks the road will be so kind as to try to move his vehicle far enough to one side to permit a car to squeeze past. After more apologies for causing inconvenience, the chauffeur expresses his thanks and drives on. It is a rare gift, indeed, this courteous etiquette of chauffeurs.

County Supervisors Pay Tribute to Publisher

A resolution paying tribute to the memory of Horace W. Amphlett, late publisher of the San Mateo Daily Times, was adopted by the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday, as follows:

"The board of supervisors of San Mateo county hereby takes official cognizance of the death of Horace W. Amphlett, and in view of his many splendid qualities as a citizen and journalist do hereby resolve as follows:

"That in the untimely end of Horace W. Amphlett this board of supervisors and the county of San Mateo have suffered the loss of a faithful friend and loyal citizen, whose interest in public affairs, and whose devotion to all worthy enterprises have won him a place in the hearts of all good citizens;

"And be it further resolved that this board extend its sympathy to his sorrowing family and business associates, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to his family and to the San Mateo Times."

"SAILOR BEWARE" COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE

At the Curran Theatre, next Sunday night, December 10, Belasco and Curran and Howard Lang will disclose a comedy that at present has New York playgoers packing the Lyceum Theatre and splitting their sides laughing at the antics of a lot of gobs transferred from battleship to stage. The play to be presented is "Sailor Beware." It is the work of Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson, and in the East is generally regarded as the rip-roaring, twenty-one gun riot of comedy of the budding season. The story has to do with sailors aboard the U. S. S. Dakota who are willing away their idle moments in Panama City. They are free from inhibitions, candid in their yearnings. They know what they want when they want it. They are honest and aboveboard in their nocturnal yearnings.

"Dynamite" Jones of the Dakota, is the Beau Brummel of the fleet and to him a spade is a spade. In his meanderings "Dynamite" encounters Billie "Stonewall" Jackson, a night club hostess. The nickname "Stonewall" suggests her chastity. She has the heaven-sent ability to say "No" under the most yesful conditions. "Dynamite" meets her and takes up the trail. And the fun begins. Blue-jacket pals of the marine lady-killer waver freely on the results of the conquest and the struggle between "Dynamite" Jones and "Stonewall" Jackson takes on bigger implications, until almost everyone but the Secretary of the Navy is involved. The result is comedy in the broadest sense.

The role of "Stonewall" Jackson is played by Muriel Kirkland, and that of Dynamite Jones by Regis Tooney. There are eighteen other characters in the unfolding of the story, gobs and girls. The production has been staged by Edward MacGregor, who acted similarly in "Grand Hotel," "Dinner at Eight," "Elizabeth the Queen," "Music in the Air" and "Show Boat."

While approving most of President Roosevelt's recovery program, William Randolph Hearst through his great chain of newspapers is vigorously attacking the NRA, which he, like many others, believes is retarding recovery, rather than aiding it. The avowed objects of the NRA are laudable enough, but its methods and their results are not so good, according to the views of an increasing number of patriotic citizens.

SYNOPSIS

In a mood of disappointment, through her inability, due to the selfishness of her family, to put finishing touches to her costume for a country dance, Anne Chamberlain is irritated by the stolidity of her escort, George Hildreth. A visitor in the community, Neal Conrad, young lawyer, is to be the "sensation" of the evening, and Hildreth, Anne's suitor, is vaguely jealous. Conrad is impressed by Anne's fresh young beauty and readily perceives her fine character. He invites her to accompany him and his hostess, Mrs. Griffin, and her son Roy, on a picnic the following Sunday. Anne accepts, though aware she is being "unconventional."

CHAPTER III

The motoring party took place, not without violent opposition from more quarters than one.

Neal broached the subject to his friend on the way home from the dance, and Roy objected to it with more vigor than Neal would have supposed him capable of displaying in regard to any subject.

"You asked Anne Chamberlain to go up to the mountains with you! Good Heavens, Neal, you don't know anything about the girl at all! She comes from one of the most worthless families in the whole town."

"Well, she's come a long way, then. You don't call her worthless, do you?"

"No, I rather like Anne."

"Good! I like her very much; and she's darned attractive."

"You must have seen plenty of good-looking girls."

"I have. And plenty of bright girls. And plenty of girls with lots of go to them. But I never saw one that combined all those qualities so thoroughly in one and the same person. I got her to tell me a little about herself. She said her father had had hard luck, and her mother wasn't strong."

"Hard luck! The kind of hard luck that comes from never doing any hard work! His farm is going to rack and ruin, it's mortgaged, and he's head over heels in debt besides. As for Anne's mother being delicate—well, she weighs about three hundred and fifty pounds, and she may have heart disease or kidney trouble. I shouldn't be at all surprised. If Anne hadn't worked her fingers to the bone and taught school besides these last two years, I don't know how they'd have lived."

"And you think a girl with that much spunk isn't worth knowing?"

Roy stared at his friend with growing astonishment. Neal had not only been swiftly hit. He had been hit hard.

"I didn't say that she wasn't worth knowing. But—why, she doesn't even know how to dress!"

"She knows that she doesn't know. And that being the case, she'll learn. Give her time. She can't be much over twenty."

"She isn't quite that."

"Then you just wait and see what she'll look like by the time she's thirty! You don't object if I at least ask your mother to go with us?"

"You can ask her. But I know she'll refuse."

"Surely she wouldn't expect me to insult the girl by inviting her to go off on an all-day trip with me without a chaperon!"

"Good Lord, Neal! You don't need to invite her at all."

"But I have. And she's accepted."

"Then you both ought to be willing to take the consequences."

"Look here, Roy, I thought you were a friend of mine. You're not acting much like one."

Roy felt a pang of contrition. He was a gentle creature.

"I'm sorry, Neal. I shouldn't have spoken as I did. Anne's a nice girl. Every one admits that. I'd be as sorry as anyone to see her get into trouble."

"It's inconceivable that she should get into trouble," said Neal icily.

"Yes, of course. What I meant was—go ahead and ask Mother. I'll say what I can to her, too."

"Thank you," said Neal, still coldly. Because of his repentant spirit, Roy said even more to his mother than he had intended. But in spite of this intercession, Neal found her adamant when he first approached her.

"I couldn't think of it, Neal. It would make talk, going on a Sunday."

"It's the only day the poor girl can go. She works like a dog all the rest of the time."

"And I don't know her at all. It wouldn't seem natural starting off that way with a stranger."

"Why, I should think you'd like to get acquainted with her. She and Roy are such good friends."

Roy's mother looked at her guest for a moment with bewilderment? What was he suggesting. That her precious child, the only companion of her declining years—Roy—and one of those Chamberlains! It was unthinkable!

"I'm trying to cut him out. I thought perhaps you wouldn't mind. But of course—"

Neal went into his bedroom, shut the door carefully behind him, and laughed. All is fair in love and war. He knew that he had won. When he emerged, Mrs. Griffin accosted him, and asked what he would like to take along for a lunch.

Anne, meanwhile, was having difficulties, too. She decided that it would be wiser to take the bull by the horns, and tell George about the invitation at once. They were on their way back over the hills when she broached the subject.

"George," she said, "do you remember what you said to me on the way in? About Neal Conrad asking me to go out with him in his horseless carriage? Well, he has."

"The fresh city guy! I hope you give him all that wuz comin' to him."

"I told him I'd be pleased to go. You suggested it yourself! Why should I think you'd mind, after that?"

"You knew I was only jokin'."

"You weren't joking. You were jeering. Trying to get even with me because I'd said you were behind the times."

"Are you goin' just to get even with me?"

It would have been welcome tidings, she knew, if she had said she was. But she was too honest.

"Partly—a little. But mostly because I want to. I've never been to the mountains."

"I'll take you to the mountains."

"You've had plenty of chances to ask me, and you never did. It's too late now."

"Are you goin' off all alone with this feller?"

"Of course not. Mrs. Griffin and Roy are going, too."

"Wal, you went outside an' set with him quite a spell, I noticed. Did he kiss you?"

"Of course not. I think you're awfully vulgar and—and insulting. I don't believe he even thought of such a thing."

"You know darned well he did."

"Well, then, it's all the more credit to him because he didn't do it! It's more than you would have done, with the same chance!"

"You ain't comparin' me an' him, are you?"

"I am not. There's no comparison possible."

They were actually quarrelling. The evening on which George had counted so much was turning out worse than a failure.

"I think you've acted real mean," he mumbled.

"I don't care if you do. If you say another word, finding fault, I'll jump out of this buggy and walk home!"

She meant what she said, and George knew it. There was nothing to do but relapse into sullen silence. Not another word was spoken during the six-mile drive. They even parted without saying good-night.

It was after two when Anne slipped into bed. An hour later before she fell asleep. But she was up again at five, and by seven the "extra wash" was on the line, and she had started picking the beans. While they were cooking, she ironed. And when the dinner dishes were dried and stacked away, she asked her father if she might take the team and drive to Wallacetown.

"Land sakes, Anne, can't you never set still? I was kinder thinkin' of mowin' the medder this afternoon."

"Oh, Pupper, you know you weren't! It's no kind of a day-day!"

"I s'pose you think you know more 'bout farmin' than I do. That's just like a woman—wal, go ahead, ef yer so set on it."

She escaped before he could change his mind, without even waiting to put on a fresh dress. It was half-past one already, and it would take her until nearly three to reach Wallacetown. The bank closed at that hour, and the bank was her first objective. She reached it barely in time.

"I want to draw some money out of my savings bank account," she said breathlessly.

The cashier, who had known her a long time, looked at her dumfounded.

"You don't mean to say you're going to cut into that money your Aunt Sarah left you?" he asked.

"That's exactly what I mean. I want fifty dollars. If I don't spend it all, I'll bring part of it back."

"Why, Anne Chamberlain, you don't mean to tell me that you're going to take it out and spend it! When you haven't but three hundred altogether, counting interest."

"Oh, Tad, please hurry!"

Still protesting, he counted the notes into her hand—five crisp, new bills. She had never seen so much money, at once, in all her life before. She tucked it into her shabby little purse, thrilling at the crackling sound which it made. Then she sped down the street to Mr. Goldenburg's store, stopping to look into the window as she reached it. There three headless "dummies" stood, draped with white muslin dresses, and above them ran the legend, "Special Bargain Sale. Marked down to $9.98."

A white muslin dress had not been included in her calculations. But, as she looked at these, she suddenly saw herself clad in one, when Neal came to call that evening and the next—if he really did come. It was the kind of thing a girl ought to wear, under such circumstances, she saw instinctively, sheer and snowy. The crude color of her pink dress, the heaviness of the black bows that adorned it, seemed hopelessly hideous to her all at once. If she bought a white muslin dress, it would mean buying white shoes and stockings, too, and the right kind of a slip, but she felt too reckless to care—if necessary, she could draw out more money. She unlatched the shop door, and walked in. By good luck, she encountered the proprietor himself, a kindly Jew who had been in Wallacetown only a few years, and who had prospered there.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JERRY HAS OTHER THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

REDDY FOX went off to the Old Pasture to put on his thinking cap. Jerry Muskrat just stopped thinking about that house Reddy talked of building. It couldn't be built without mud, and how were they to get mud where no mud was? They couldn't, so that was all there was about it. It had been great fun to plan that house for Reddy Fox. It had interested him greatly and he would dearly have loved to help build it. But it couldn't be done, and besides he had other things to think of.

"I've had rest enough," thought Jerry the very night he decided that Reddy's house could be no more than a dream. "It is time for me to begin to think about getting some food laid away for winter. If Reddy Fox ever has a house like mine he will have to build it without any help from me. I've wasted all the time on it I am going to. It is queer how interested in houses Reddy has become. I never knew him to be before. And now I think of it, he has been wonderfully pleasant. He certainly can be nice when he wants to be. He hasn't once tried to catch me. I don't believe that such a thought had even entered his head."

Wouldn't Reddy have smiled if he could have known what Jerry was thinking? You know and I know that the catching of Jerry was all that he was thinking about and his talk of a face of the water made as Jerry dived. "Jerry seems to have something on his mind. I wonder what he is up to now? He might at least have stopped long enough to pass the time of day. I must find out what he is about."

So Reddy waited and waited and waited some more. He managed to hide his impatience and when at last Jerry climbed out on the Big Rock for a rest, Reddy was just the same pleasant fellow he had been the night before.

"Well, Jerry," he exclaimed, "I thought you had deserted me. I've been waiting ever so long. I thought perhaps you may have thought of some way of building that house without mud."

"I'm sorry, but there isn't any other way," replied Jerry. "If there was I wouldn't be able to help you any. I've got too much to do to mind anybody's business but my own. If you want a house you'll have to get some one else to help build or else build it all yourself."

"But, what, may I ask, are you so suddenly busy about?" asked Reddy, and tried hard to keep the eagerness from his voice.

"I'm laying up food for the winter," replied Jerry briefly. "Until that is done I can't think of anything else."

With this he dived from the Big Rock.

"Well, I Never!" Exclaimed Reddy.

house was merely to get Jerry so interested that he would come ashore. The next night Reddy visited the Smiling Pool just as usual. He couldn't keep away. He hadn't thought of any way to get mud to build the house, but he hoped to be able to persuade Jerry that they might start the house and to trust to luck to get the mud when it was needed.

But when he reached the Smiling Pool no Jerry was visible. Reddy waited and waited and waited. At last Jerry appeared but it was plain to see that he was in a hurry. He merely nodded to Reddy Fox and then dived.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Reddy, staring at the little circles on the surface of the water made as Jerry dived. "Jerry seems to have something on his mind. I wonder what he is up to now? He might at least have stopped long enough to pass the time of day. I must find out what he is about."

So Reddy waited and waited and waited some more. He managed to hide his impatience and when at last Jerry climbed out on the Big Rock for a rest, Reddy was just the same pleasant fellow he had been the night before.

the arm and shoulders force the club back. After the clubhead has been brought back approximately a third of the backswing arc it suddenly becomes necessary to enlist the aid of the wrists in raising the club higher. The turn of the shoulders and hips on the backswing has opened the clubhead so there is no necessity of rolling the wrists. Instead as the left hand pushes the club back they lift the club up gradually, maintaining the slow back maximum, and slowly cocking themselves.

Mother's Cook Book

SEVERAL GOOD THINGS

SERVE crushed peanut brittle over ice cream. It adds to the flavor and is most appetizing.

Glorified Rice.
Whip one cupful of cream, add a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Just before serving, toss two cupfuls of boiled rice into the cream mixture and serve topped with a teaspoonful of raspberry or other fruit jam for each serving.

Ginger Waldorf Salad.
Fold together one cupful each of diced tart apple and celery, one-half cupful of broken nut meats, one-half cupful of mayonnaise and one-fourth cupful of candied ginger. Marinate with french dressing and rub each salad leaf with a cut clove of garlic. Serve at once after adding the nuts.

Oxtails en Casserole.
Cut the tails in sections and cook in boiling water to cover; cook five minutes, then drain, dredge with flour, fry in fat with a small minced onion. Season well, place in a casserole with two cupfuls of strained tomato juice, one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce and one finely minced carrot. Cover and cook in a slow oven three and one-half hours, adding more water as needed. Ten minutes before serving

LOVE AT HOME

By ANNE CAMPBELL

LOVE is no mocking bird that sings A thousand miles away, But a brown wren that blithely brings A song to me today.

He perches in my sunny yard, And trills a song to me Of common joy, a task that's hard, And home's tranquility.

He has no song of a far land That lures my heart to roam. He sings a song I understand. A simple song of home!

A. unit extends to all their friends a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year greetings.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED NOW ON PAY ROLL

All jobless men on San Mateo county's approved relief rolls, numbering approximately 1,550, were at work last Monday and arrangements are being made for placing women on jobs under the new C. W. A. program, it was announced by Sam D. Merk, county relief administrator.

With the sending out of all work cards completed Saturday night, it was discovered that more than 100 men listed as unemployed did not respond, having secured jobs since the last checkup of the county rolls, said the county relief administrator. The county's quota under the C. W. A. was set at 1,646.

In addition to the quota of men already at work, San Mateo county has been assigned 262 jobs on state highways in a notification from Col. John H. Skeggs, district engineer of the state highway commission.

Arrangements will be completed by the end of the week for placing fifty-five single men without homes in a camp at the county memorial park, where they will work on roads, fire trails and drainage projects, tree cutting and other manual labor.

The men placed Monday are on county road and drainage projects, tree cutting and other manual labor.

Approximately 1,000 men working under auspices of the San Francisco C. W. A. program are on jobs in San Mateo county, said Mr. Merk. They are at work in Sharps Park, San Francisco municipal golf course at Salada Beach, and also are working on two road projects, one of them a highway extending south along the beach from Fleishacker pool.

Mrs. Sisevich Passes Away in the Tehachapi Prison

Mrs. Gladys Sisevich, who was convicted of two counts of manslaughter following the death of Mrs. Addalyn Lyons and her baby under the wheels of Mrs. Sisevich's car on July 20, on the Bayshore highway, in the south end of the county, died last Friday night in the new Tehachapi prison for women.

Prison officials said that Mrs. Sisevich had died from natural causes, and it was believed that she suffered a nervous collapse.

Mrs. Sisevich was convicted by a jury in the court of Superior Judge Franklin Swart. Shortly after she was stricken ill and was taken to the Community hospital. Judge Swart delayed sentence for several days, but after appointing a medical commission which declared Mrs. Sisevich was able to appear, Judge Swart pronounced sentence.

AIR PAGEANT TO BE HELD

Final plans are being made for the first air pageant to be held in San Mateo county at the Curtis-Wright flying field, December 16 to 17. It will be known as the Pacific International Air Pageant, and will be formally opened through a radio broadcast by President Roosevelt, if the committee is successful in making such arrangements.

Most of the country's leading flyers will be there and will participate in stunting, air races and all other aviation displays. The thrills of the show will be climaxed as a major feature by low-ceiling stunt flying, which is rather risky, and can only be accomplished by the most expert of flyers.

The co-operation of the public by showing their interest will greatly influence the return of a similar air pageant to this county.

AUTO LICENSE TIME NEAR

Renewal of registration and issuance of 1934 license plates for approximately two million automobiles in California will commence next month. The renewal period will open on the morning of Tuesday, January 2, and continue to January 31 at midnight. The state registration fee, fixed by law, is $3 for private passenger automobiles.

Owners who fail to apply for new plates before expiration of the renewal period will have to pay double, or $6, as a penalty.

Plates will be issued by the Division of Registration, Department of motor vehicles, at its various offices, with mail applications being received at the Sacramento headquarters. The California State Automobile Association will conduct a plate issuance service for member motorists at its thirty-three offices in northern and central California.

NEW TIME-SWITCH SERVES BOTH STORES AND HOMES

A new electric clock time-switch, known as the Utility Timer, has been perfected by the General Electric Company. The device serves business establishments by automatically turning lights on and off in showcases, display windows and advertising signs. It also can be used in the home to turn radio sets on and off, to time sunlamp treatments, to switch on lights when the family is away and thus discourage burglars by giving the house the appearance of being lived in.

Celebration of Seventieth Birthday

The many friends and relatives of Mrs. J. Almquist gathered at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. Hanson, of San Diego avenue, Wednesday, November 29, and showered her with beautiful gifts in honor of her seventieth birthday. At the close of a perfect day, dainty refreshments were enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Axel Almquist, he son and daughter-in-law, from Lake Tahoe; Mr. and Mrs. John Almquist, of Oakland, a grandson; Mr. and Mrs. Cochran and son Gordon, of Oakland; Mrs. Cochran is a granddaughter and her son Gordon a great-grandson; Elizabeth Almquist, of Oakland, a granddaughter; daughters Mrs. H. Hanson, F. Hanson and Mrs. Ethel Barger; Mrs. Hilda and Helen Bartling, Mrs. Alice Munroe, Mrs. Bosque, of Oakland, Mrs. E. Browning, of Albany, Mrs. Sweetman, Mrs. B. Hanson, Herman Hanson, Fritz Hanson, grandson, Melvin Hanson, granddaughter, Elaine Hanson and Janette Barger.

The Staggets Social Club held their weekly outing at the concessions at the beach last Friday night, December 1. Besides members Iola Themis, Sis McLeod, Frances Jacoma, Agnes Gioni, Dorothy Fuller and Tibby Gioni, they had as their guests for the evening: Miss Agnes Fraser, from Belmont, Mildred Peters and Virginia Spencer, from San Rafael. After leaving the concessions the remainder of the evening was spent at Kelly's Tavern. A good time was enjoyed by all.

A whist party will be given Friday evening in the parish hall of Our Lady of Perpetual Help church by the ladies of the parish, starting at 8:30 sharp. A very nice time is assured to all those who attend.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard
VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1933 NUMBER 20

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Summer Boarder: "What a beautiful view that is!"

Farmer: "Maybe. But if you had to plant that view, harrow it, mow it, fence it, and pay taxes on it, it would look dern onery."

S. O. S. See Our Stuff.

Matrimonial Agent: "There is one other lady I can offer you, but I will be honest with you and tell you in advance that she squints and has false teeth."

Applicant: "Are they gold?"

A man caught a boy in his garden, stealing apples, and handed him over to the police. As it was the boy's first offence the judge let him off, but told him never to yield to such temptation again, adding: "Ye should have flown from the evil one."

"So I did, sir," replied the boy, "but he caught me before I got over the fence."

Lady: "I don't like the way this parrot swears."

Bird Dealer: "I'm sorry, ma'am, but I can't give you one that can swear better."

Shingles, all grades and kinds.

The difference between death and taxes is that death doesn't get worse every time the legislature meets.

It is said the government has discovered twenty-six gold hoarders in California. They should be punished by turning their names and addresses over to a high power sales organization.

Yes, we sell paints and oils—the best.

Student: "Where are you going to get that check of yours cashed, pal?"

His Roommate: "I couldn't say. I can't think of a single place where I'm unknown."

We recognize Russia and then send her a Bullitt.
